BEVERLY CITY HALL

Beverly's city hall has a fascinating history, having undergone several major alterations since its construction in 1783. The structure was the last of three similar brick mansions built along Main Street (presently Cabot Street) by the Cabot brothers — John in 1781, George in 1782 and Andrew a year later. Today John's home is the headquarters of the Beverly Historical Society, while that of George, across the street from John's, was demolished in 1918. All three of the brothers were merchant-captains who had made fortunes from West Indian trade and privateering before and during the Revolution. Israel Thorndike, another merchant-captain of this era, bought Andrew's estate upon his death in 1793 and used the building as a summer residence until his own death in 1832. Thorndike's heirs placed the estate on the market in the 1830s and it was purchased by the Town of Beverly in 1841.

To meet the estate's price of $6,500, the town utilized three sources. Funds acquired from the distribution of the national revenue surplus in the late 1830s amounted to $5,500; the sale of the old town hall provided $800; and the remainder came from the sale of the land around the mansion. At this time the acquired Thorndike land extended eastward to the shore. The lot development process at this time resulted in the laying out of Thorndike, Abbott, Brown and Endicott streets. In addition to the original investment the town added the cost of new granite posts from Rockport and chains from England. The stable adjacent to the mansion was converted to an armory at that time.

For the next thirty-three years the town made due with the original structure despite continually increasing demands for more space. However, in 1874 a $25,000 renovation was made, consisting of a doubling of the size of the building, the addition of a fourth floor, and the installation of a Mansard roof. The structure was again altered in 1886 at a cost of $40,000. The third, and final, major alteration took place in the early 1930s, when the fourth floor was removed and a flat roof replaced the Mansard roof.
